He said it has given him time to reflect and grieve, and said he will miss his association with the Mayor and Council. He said he and his wife carefully observed the recount process and it was very transparent. He was even given the opportunity to challenge ballots that were improperly signed. He found no fault with the recount, and said he yields the election to Bret Anderson. He said this will bring to a close 40 years of public service, and he cannot think of a better place to end it than on the Farmington City Council. Mayor Talbot thanked Jim for his service, and said there will be a deep hole.
